MISSION: The TCMUG exists to benefit users of Apple computers by creating a network of members to share information and offer support in the ever changing world of computer technology.

Can someone running Windows get the information I create with the Mac? I do bookkeeping for other people.

Sure, it's just like you are running any other Windows machine. If the other person has a compatible version of the software you use, then it's no problem. If you use, say QuickBooks Pro 2008 or MYOB Plus under Windows XP, then someone using the same generation on their Windows machine, should have no problem reading the files you edit. You can use a Windows-formatted USB flash drive or burn a CD or email the files. ~ Bradley Dichter • LIMac Forum, Long Island, NY
